The rapeseed oil used is of high quality, and is from NZ

Rapeseed is a member of the brassica family which includes cauliflower, broccoli, cabbage, and turnips.

Plant breeding and selection has produced this variety which is low in erucic and glucosinolates.

The extraction of the oil from the seed is by cold pressing which means squeezing the seed under very high pressure to release the oil.

The process is carefully controlled so that the oil is not subjected to temperatures above 40°C.

The oil is then separated from the meal by a combination of sedimentation and fine filtering.

There are no chemicals used in the extraction process.

Benefits:

- For skincare, rapeseed oil absorbs quickly and doesn't leave a greasy after-feel
- Rapeseed oil is extremely moisturizing and contributes to creamy lather
- The vitamin E content of the Finnish rapeseed oil is relatively high (19 mg/100 g*)
